

LEADERSHIP

A hand-drawn illustration on a light-colored wall. The word "LEADERSHIP" is written in black, hand-drawn capital letters. Below the word, two hands are drawn in a reddish-brown color, with fingers spread, appearing to hold or support the word from underneath.

Leadership in Action

Brad West often posts pictures on social media of himself working alongside people in the community, like here where he helped volunteers to create a rain garden in Lions Park. By posting this, he shows his followers that a true leader doesn't lead from high above, they lead by example and stand together with the people they lead. It will encourage people to get involved too when they see their leader is right there with them. .

Leadership to me

I show leadership online by making sure that my friends only see me posting positive messages and never breaking them down, hoping they can follow along, and build someone else up too.
